DEDICATED BEYOND DUTY

STRATEGIC PLAN 2024 - 2028

North West
Hospice

Foreword

As we stride forward with confidence in a post-pandemic era, we are proud to present our strategic plan for the next four years. It is an essential framework that will guide us towards a sustainable and resilient future, where we can continue to make an important impact during some of the most challenging times for our patients and their families.

The strategic plan has not been developed in a vacuum but has come about following an extensive process of listening to our patients, their families and partners, our supporters, and our employed and voluntary staff. They have told us what matters most to them, and we have looked to reflect it in our strategic planning.

In looking to the future, we are particularly conscious of our relationships with our community, and with the HSE. Our community enables us to continue and expand our work, and lets us do more for those who are most in need of our services. Our partnership with the HSE is also vital for our success. By working together, we can continue to drive care standards even higher.

We have also worked to ensure that our Strategic Plan is fully aligned with the Department of Health's goal for Universal Palliative Care, which has as its key objectives: Right Care, Right Place, Right Time, Right People and Good Governance.

Mindful of how quickly our world has been thrown into turmoil in recent years by global conflict and a life-changing pandemic, our strategic plan provides a flexible and responsive framework for the future. It represents a clear direction rather than a fixed roadmap, giving us room to manoeuvre in the face of the unexpected.

Over the coming years, we will develop more specific and targeted plans focused on issues such as patient care and comfort, sustainability of services, staff well-being, technology, and support services. These plans will evolve organically as we work toward becoming an even more integrated and effective part of the local health and care system.

Together, we will take a leading role in shaping palliative and end-of-life care in the North West of Ireland. At the heart of everything we do, our patients, families, and communities will continue to be what matters most to us, and what drive our standards as we strive for continuous improvement.

We are committed to enhancing and developing the highest quality care possible - always mindful of the limited resources available to us - while extending our reach to serve all parts of the community. At all times, we will strive to maintain our unique sense of balance, combining the strategic focus of a business, the compassion of a charity, and the heart and soul of a caring and compassionate hospice.

With enormous and genuine gratitude for your continued support,

The North West Hospice Charity

Why the next four years is so important for North West Hospice

" The partnership between NorthWest Hospice and the HSE is exemplar in how community organisations and the HSE can work together to provide high quality palliative and end of life care. North West Hospice is rooted in the local community and its work is vital to development of new services, enhancing public understanding of palliative care, and ensuring patients and their families are always at the centre of the care delivery."

Maurice Dillon, National Lead for Palliative Care, Access & Integration

" I want people to know that this is a unique service that needs to be spread all over Ireland. What NorthWest Hospice is doing is showing leadership and there is nothing like it for quality of service, anything and everything. You have the people there who are dedicated beyond duty. I've a cure going out and I'm happy going home."

Sean Owens (90) North West Hospice Patient.

" When my mother first went into palliative care, obviously my father was very worried how things would turn out, but once she was in there, his mind was put at rest because of the wonderful care she was receiving. They made it so wonderful we can never forget it."

Adrian Tansey, son of former patient, Phyllis Tansey.

" Staff were very attentive and supportive of us, they make the journey easier, and they were kind , empathetic and practical, very patient and always available for advice or support."

Patient Family Member.

" The Kindness, care and support provided to us as a family was exemplary and is greatly appreciated."

What we do

North West Hospice Charity is a company limited by guarantee and an Irish registered charity (no: CHY7983). It fundraises on behalf of North West Hospice to complement and enhance the clinical services provided by the Health Service Executive (HSE). We are recognised with 'Triple Lock' status by the Charities Institute Ireland (CII), a distinction reserved for charities demonstrating the highest standards in transparent reporting, ethical fundraising, and strong governance structures. This important third-party recognition for North West Hospice Charity ensures trust and accountability for donors, members, and the general public.

Dedicated to enhancing the well-being of patients and their families, North West Hospice Charity collaborates closely with medical professionals to identify and address specific needs, focusing on continuous service development and facility enhancement. While the HSE covers core running costs, North West Hospice Charity relies on the generosity of individuals, patients, families, the public, and various organisations - through donations and fundraising events - to support specialised care needs, acquire equipment, and offer necessary support to patients, staff and families.

The North West Hospice provides excellence in palliative and end-of-life care for patients and their families. The hospice is a quiet, calm and supportive environment where staff spend time with our patients and their families, getting to know them, listening to them and ensuring that all their needs are met.

In addition to the medical and nursing care we provide, we offer a complete range of support services such as social work, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, spiritual and emotional wellbeing.

At its simplest, hospice care eases the physical and emotional pain of death and dying, but it is not focused on death alone. Rather, it's about letting people focus on living right until the very end. This provides an experience that not only comforts the patient but is of enormous value afterwards for family and friends as they reflect on a life well lived and well ended.

Care is provided in a number of places including our Sligo Hospice, Sligo University Hospital and in the homes of patients throughout Sligo, Leitrim, South Donegal and West Cavan. Family members, close friends and carers are also supported, both during a person's illness and in bereavement. We are deeply passionate about working closely with those we serve, our communities and our partner organisations. Together, we aim to reach all those who may benefit from our exceptional, person-centred care.

" During our loved one's final hours, the hospice nurse stayed by our side and offered every comfort possible. It made such a difference to the family to have her by our side at the time of death."

Patient Family Member

" Being part of the North West Hospice team in a voluntary capacity is a huge honour and has brought huge fulfilment to my retirement years, it is great to feel part of a compassionate community."

Arriving at our strategic direction.

In looking to arrive at a sustainable strategic direction that will provide us with the flexibility and the resilience that our organisation needs, our challenge has been to find the right balance between a range of competing needs and demands that grow stronger with each passing year.

These needs include continually developing our services, supporting a capital build project, finding ways to respond to the increasing demand in a climate of less predictable funding, and responding to the unprecedented pressure on health and care services that an aging population creates.

In keeping with our people-centred approach, our clear and exciting strategy has been developed following a lengthy process of listening to our patients, families, partners, supporters and our employed and voluntary staff. It also reflects the views of the many supporters and donors who stand with us every day in helping us turn our vision of care into reality.

The plan has been designed to provide flexibility in the face of changing needs within the communities we serve, along with new and emerging socio-economic challenges that we face.

Mindful of this rapidly changing landscape in which we operate, we recognise the need to regularly revisit our objectives during the operation of the strategy for the North West Hospice over the next four years.

Our Values, Our Vision and Our Purpose

It is impossible to predict where we are going in the future without first defining where we are right now. As part of our work to develop our Strategic Plan, we undertook an important and insightful exercise in which we consulted key stakeholders of the North West Hospice to identify our core values - as well as the everyday behaviours that demonstrate our commitment to those values.

These values are central to the culture and ethos of North West Hospice, and underpin what makes our Hospice such a special place for the people we care for, and also for the wonderful team which we are so fortunate to have working on our side.

We also examined our core Vision and Purpose, which lie at the heart of our identity and will be key drivers of our future success.
